

There are a lot of scholarship opportunities available for students to pursue. This document is a compilation of websites that you can visit to learn about available opportunities as well as a listing of individual scholarships. We want to you keep in mind that these scholarships usually provide funds for one year of university. Students may have to reapply for these scholarships in subsequent years or look for new opportunities.

Please take a look at the websites and read about what scholarships are available so that you have an understanding of the requirements of applications and can keep track of deadlines of ones that interest you.

LIST OF WEBSITES YOU CAN VISIT TO LEARN ABOUT SCHOLARSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Peterson's

Peterson's is a one-stop scholarship resource — not that we recommend this strategy -- with a number of great (and free!) resources. The site boasts $10 billion in scholarship awards and has an impressive collection of articles, test prep resources and more.

But it's not just a stockpile of scholarships. It also has the tools and tips you need to start your search -- and its search filters make navigation simple. Filling out a very short survey allows you to adjust the filters as you go, which gives you more control than sites that require extensive profiles to get started.

Unigo

Like Peterson's, Unigo has plenty to offer beyond just scholarships, including jobs, internships, college profiles and rankings, articles and a textbook store. When it comes to scholarships, the site offers both profile-based matching as well as easy-to-browse categories.

Perhaps best of all is its user-friendly interface, which is somewhat reminiscent of a photo-sharing site. It makes finding scholarships simple. What's more, the site values security and privacy of personal information – so, in other words, no spam!

Fastweb

Fastweb, a subsidiary of Monster, hosts more than 1.5 million scholarships that amount to more than $3.4 billion dollars. And it's all so well organized! The search platform's filters make it hard not to find exactly what you're looking for.

One minor drawback: You have to fill out a profile to get started. But the profile helps match you with scholarships most likely to suit your needs, and the sign-up process is relatively painless.

Cappex

Cappex has a large scholarship database and they're not afraid to brag a bit: "We've Got More Than $11 Billion in Scholarships." Registering can be annoying, but you'll be glad you took the time to get personalized results.

Cappex sets itself apart with its “What Are My Chances” tool, which attempts to calculate the odds that you’ll get into a certain college before you apply.

Chegg

Over the years, Chegg has expanded from its humble beginnings as an online textbook store to become a well-rounded education resource. It acquired scholarship match service Zinch in 2011 and now hosts scholarships totaling over $1 billion.

Its interface is simple and the mandatory sign-up process is well worth the time. What’s more, it has a “top scholarship picks this week” category, which highlights opportunities you may have otherwise missed. And on top of the scholarships, Chegg offers homework help, tutoring, test prep, internships and (of course) textbooks.

The College Board

As with all of the best resources, The College Board offers much more than an extensive list of scholarships. It also has test prep, articles and college search tools, among others. And its “scholarships, other financial aid and internships from more than 2,200 programs” totals nearly $6 billion. Added bonus: While you’re perusing the site you can prepare for the SAT!

Niche

Formerly known as College Prowler, Niche is one of the easiest sites to navigate. It’s neatly organized into categories that make it simple to start finding and applying for scholarships.

You can browse by categories – including, but not limited to, sports, interest area, career and major -- but it can be tricky to filter outside of these preset groupings. Still, with no required sign-up and a user-friendly design, Niche is a simple and powerful resource.

Scholarships.com

Scholarships.com’s tagline says it all: “With more than 2.7 million scholarship and grant opportunities worth more than $19 billion, just about everyone is bound to find something.”

It’s one of the largest databases and is updated daily. You can browse by category, but if you really want to navigate the extensive list of opportunities, you’ll need to make a profile. It’s one flaw: The site has ample information about alternate forms of financial aid, but it lacks some of the resources other sites offer.

CollegeNET.com

Scholarships are listed by their award amounts, with the highest payout listed first. While the site’s search results are often extensive, it could benefit from some more filtering or organizational tools.

Scholarship Monkey

Scholarship Monkey offers three search options: personalized search, search by keyword and lists of scholarships. Results from any of these searches can then be further filtered by college, but unfortunately not by any other criteria.

Despite its huge index of scholarships, the site is not as easily navigable compared to some others, making it more difficult to take full advantage of its opportunities. Another reason it ranks lower on the list: spam. I've received numerous emails from the site, even after unsubscribing. Nonetheless, it's a great tool with a huge database of scholarships – even if it is trickier to use than others on the list.

PRIVATE SCHOLARSHIPS AVAILABLE AT THE UCs

Private scholarships can help cover expenses not covered by UC and state financial aid. Consult with our campus contacts for help with finding scholarship opportunities, or visit these websites that list scholarships for undocumented students. Keep in mind that UC is not affiliated with these sites. Before entering personal information at these (or any other) sites, make sure to read the site's privacy policy carefully.

SCHOLARSHIPS FROM THE PRIVATE SECTOR

Visit the websites of the organizations offering the scholarships to see what specific requirements you have to meet in order to be eligible to apply. Although, the applications for the 2020-2021 application cycle may not be posted on their websites right now, you can take this opportunity to learn about the scholarships.

Please keep track of the following -

1. Deadlines for the application
2. Letters of Recommendation
3. Essays
4. Submission of your Transcript

Create an Excel spreadsheet or a Word Document to keep track of all of this information. Copy the essay questions you are being asked to answer into your document as well. See if the questions are similar, because that will allow you to write essays that can be used for multiple applications.
